

Standardized Testing Information

Standardized tests (such as SAT or ACT exams) are not a requirement for admittance to many colleges and universities in Massachusetts and greater New England for students who have an Individualized Educational Program (IEP). If a student would like to take a standardized test, he or she can register to take the exam at a local high school or testing center or register to test at Learning Prep. Students with a diagnosed learning disability may qualify for special accommodations. Accommodations are granted based on student need. At times, a student may not receive all of the accommodations that he or she requested. In that case, an appeal can be filed on the student's behalf.

_____ Students who are interested in taking a standardized test as part of the college application process must register by the deadlines listed below. Families are responsible for creating a profile and registering for a specific testing date and location. Learning Prep School participates in school-based testing, which occurs during a set time frame after the national testing date. When registering your student, please indicate that you are registering for accommodations. After you have registered for a test and filled out a release of information form, contact Erin Brown to request accommodations.

Please keep in mind that it takes approximately 7-10 weeks to process an accommodations request. Testing accommodations are granted based on IEP's and neuropsychological evaluations. If you are planning on registering your student to take the SAT or ACT exam it is important to apply for accommodations early and review your student's IEP to ensure that all preferred accommodations are listed in the current version of the IEP. In some cases, students who miss the deadline may still be able to register for an exam, however a late fees will be applied. Learning Prep's C.E.E.B. code is 222345. This code is required when filling out college applications and registering for standardized testing.

Standardized Testing Optional Colleges:
SAT or ACT is NOT Required

- Additional colleges or universities may waive testing for students based on the individual's school's specific criteria.
- Standardized testing is not required for admittance to community colleges, job corps or trade schools

Connecticut:

Eastern Connecticut State University
Mitchell College
Sacred Heart University
Western Connecticut State University

Massachusetts:

Anna Maria College
Bay State College
Benjamin Franklin Inst. of Technology
Bridgewater State University
Cambridge College
Dean College
Emmanuel College
Endicott College
Fitchburg State University
Hampshire College
Montserrat College of Art
Newbury College
Nichols College
Northpoint Bible College
Pine Manor College
Regis College
Salem State University
University of Massachusetts, All Campus Schools
Westfield State University
Western New England University

New Hampshire:

Plymouth State University
Southern New Hampshire University

Rhode Island:

Rhode Island College
Salve Regina University
Johnson and Wales University

Vermont:

Landmark College

*Updated June 2017